

Will you please listen to the people who are on the front line, the employees "actually" on the aircraft! The 2 main reasons I strongly urge you to not relax this restriction is first and foremost because quite seriously what is to stop terrorist from communicating with others accomplices on board via cell phones on positions of flight crew and FAMS. Worse what is to stop a terrorist from packing a bomb in their suitcase in the cargo hold and simply dialing the appropriate numbers to blow the belly out of the plane sending all to a firey death. Suicide bombers have no problem blowing up a car with only themselves in it. Why would the not find a packed plane with infidels even more attractive. After all, they're going to Alla for this. The other objection I have to this is not only will it fill the cabin with unbarable cacophony of noisy chatter, but think of some of the fowl language that too often will be overheard not only by crew and passengers alike, but also young children. Text messaging is a much better idea and emails. Do not relax this restriction, please. Listen to us onboard. Thankyou very much.
